" How Do I Get my Child to Listen"

Here are 6 Tips we have found helpful:

- Wait until you have your child's attention before you start talking to him/her.
- Use as few words as possible when you ask your child to do something.
- Try to see it from your child's point of view. (e.g. if you can give your child time to finish what he/she is doing before he/she needs to do something else, it often works better).
- Stay calm.
- Set up consistent routines. This should lead to fewer power struggles.
- Give your child your full attention on his/her level when your child is talking. This goes a long way in letting your child know that what he/she is saying is important.
