Georgia school district hiring 450 teachers, no education degree required

Staff reports that Savannah-Chatham schools are feeling the hurt of a growing problem nationwide. As more students flow into Savannah-Chatham classrooms, fewer teachers are around to meet their needs. Across the United States, there is a huge drop in the number of students pursuing education degrees. So right now, Savannah-Chatham schools are holding up the help wanted sign—with 450 openings. To make sure they get those positions filled, the district is using a new program called Alternative Pathways to Teaching. (Ga Trend)

Georgia growth super-concentrated in Atlanta; half state's counties are losing population

Lee Shearer reports that population growth in Georgia has resumed after slumping during the recession, but the pattern of that growth has markedly changed. Metro Atlanta has for years been a magnet for people migrating into the state; from 1990 to 2010, Atlanta's population grew from about 2.6 million to 4.1 million people, according to the Atlanta Regional Commission. (Ga Trend)

Funding approved for reactor design for new subs

Gordon Jackson reports that funding for the design and development of the nuclear reactors for the replacement fleet of ballistic missile submarines has been approved by the U.S. House of Representatives. The 2017 Defense Appropriations Bill includes $1.48 billion for the design of the reactors that will power the replacement fleet of Ohio-class submarines ported at Naval Submarine Base Kings Bay and another Navy base in Bangor, Wash. The 4th of July

Last summer, July 4th found me in downtown Bangkok suffering through sweltering heat. My wife, Kai, is originally from Thailand, so we vacation there about once a year visiting her extended family. I had been watching my calendar trying to figure out how I would celebrate our holiday, 10,000 miles away from home. After all, King Rama IX, was born in Boston, and had started out his life as an American citizen. Surely there would be something of significance somewhere in the capital. But, as much as I searched for a glimpse of the American flag, none were to be seen. It was just another workday in a crowded city. I thought I would take a taxi over to the Joint US Military Advisory Group, Thailand, knowing I could get in and they had a bar where surely Americans would be gathered, but my wife did not seem too interested and she had other plans for me shopping in the countless stores, looking for that special bargain.

I had all but given up hope of something American when I returned to the hotel to get out of my soaked clothes and freshen up before dinner. I hopped onto the small elevator and was joined by a young Asian girl somewhere around twelve. I greeted her with a smiling "Hello". And much to my astonishment she came back at me in very good English with a smiling "How are you"? "Where are you from?", I asked knowing that my hotel was usually filled with all sorts of people from different Asian countries. She giggled and told me, "Thailand of course, where are you from"? "I am from the United States". But, it did not register with her. Thinking quickly I came back with, "I am from America". She gasped. She looked at me and with lots of enthusiasm, eyes big, and told me, "I want to go to America"! "I hope you do, you will like it", I responded. And with that the doors opened and she disappeared down the hall.

I thought to myself as the elevator continued up to my floor that she had probably just met her first American. And, whatever she had learned about our country she wanted to come and see it. With that quick exchange I became a representation to that young girl of everything that I am proud to be – an American.

Happy July 4th to all of you.

PHYSICAL ACTIVITY

How many hours do you sit in front of the TV or stare at the computer or cell phone? Back away from the electronic devices! Do you want to live longer and be healthier? Of course you do!

You can do this by being physically active. A big advantage of being active is the decreased risk of heart disease, diabetes, colon cancer, and high blood pressure.

Being physically active can also enhance your ability to perform daily tasks that once were a lot easier to do. As you age small tasks can become more difficult.

An added bonus of physical activity can be the family time. This can increase communication and improve family relationships, which is priceless!

Reducing depression and improving your mood are two more great benefits of getting out and being active. Take time to enjoy nature.

Get moving and put some of these ideas to the test this week.

WORDS FROM THE POWER 99.1

The 4th of every July is when we as a nation celebrates the adoption of the Declaration of Independence on July 4th, 1776. From that day forward, we would be known as the United States of America. Most of us will be off from work, family may be coming over for a BBQ, or that evening you may be headed to see some fireworks, but what does the day symbolize to most? One word, freedom.

Beloved, remember we are also free in Christ. Romans 8:1-2 says it best, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." On this July 4th yes, celebrate the freedom of this great nation, but let us also be thankful to God for the freedom we have through Jesus Christ.

Kneel before Jesus and you can stand before anyone

Keep God's name sacrosanct
 Every minute of every day on Earth, someone somewhere sends up the piteous plea: "Lord have mercy!" It may be a mournful mother whose baby is lost following the pangs of hunger. It may be some poor soul watching the hordes of ISIS murdering their way through the most remote of villages. But no matter from which Hell on Earth these cries are sent Heaven's way, they are heard.
 -Judi McLeod

The Lord will keep you from all harm—he will watch over your life; the Lord will watch over your coming and going both now and forevermore.

Psalm 121:7-8 NIV

Navy commodore to be relieved of command over Iran's capture of his sailors

The commodore in charge of the two U.S. Navy boats that strayed into Iranian waters leading to the capture of his 10 sailors for 16 hours in January will be relieved of command likely putting an end to his career, Fox News has learned.

Capt. Kyle Moses, commodore of Commander Task Force (CTF) 56 was responsible for the two riverine boats and Kuwait-based crew. The Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral John Richardson, is set to release a long-awaited report on June 30th about the events surrounding the January incident now that the investigation is complete.

Iranian Revolutionary Guard forces captured the two high-speed patrol boats near Farsi Island, a well-known Iranian base, hours after the boats left Kuwait on January 12 with the intended purpose of sailing to Bahrain. Five sailors were aboard each boat.

The Navy crew was inexperienced and running late to make a rendezvous at a refueling point in the Persian Gulf when the capture took place, according to officials.

The detention of the American crew came the same day as President Obama's State of the Union address and came at a sensitive time for the administration days before formally implementing the nuclear deal between Iran and six world powers led by the United States.

Days after the incident, Defense Secretary Ash Carter said the Navy patrol boats had "misnavigated" into Iranian territorial waters. The second in command of the riverine squadron, Cmdr. Eric Rasch, was fired from his job last month.

Multiple defense officials tell Fox News a "multitude of errors" led to the capture of the U.S. Navy crew.

First, there was no navigation brief, a major violation of Navy protocol. When any Navy ship gets underway, even for something as minor as shirting berths from one pier to another, it is standard for a Navy crew to conduct a navigation brief discussing issues such as hazards to navigation or, in this case, an Iranian base near the planned course.

Second, the chain of command was not well defined on the two boats. While a young lieutenant was the highest-ranking individual on either of the two 50-foot boats, when the order was given to evade the Iranian forces, the helmsman refused the order.

Third, defense officials tell Fox News the Navy had become too complacent with the its treatment by Iranian forces in the months leading up to the January capture.

"The story here is these guys had gotten so used to Iranians doing stupid s---, having weapons pointed at them all the time, they didn't know they were being captured until the Iranians boarded their boats," one defense official said describing the lack of situational awareness by the Navy crew. "They messed up pretty bad."

FIREWORKS SAFETY +

Safety is our main concern. And as fireworks professionals we enjoy the magnificent splendor and beauty of a great fireworks display but also respect fireworks for their inherent risks. We always handle them in a safe manner abiding by some common sense guidelines. We want you to do the same.

1.Never let children handle fireworks.

Only adults should handle and light fireworks. Fireworks burn VERY hot, potentially causing severe burns, and are intended to be handled only by responsible adults.

2.Do not consume alcohol while handling or lighting fireworks.

Alcohol impairs your senses, judgement, and reaction time. Impairment leads to accidents, injuries, and possibly death. Be a responsible adult ~ don't consume alcohol and handle fireworks.

3.Have a fire extinguisher or a source of water near by.

Should the need arise, keep a fire extinguisher, water hose, or a bucket of water near by to douse any flames. Appoint another responsible adult as a spotter to alert you to any emergency that me arise and be ready with the water source.

4. Keep a First Aid Kit nearby.

Keep a First Aid Kit neaby for treatment of minor burns.

5.Light only one firework at a time.

6.Don't try and relight a "dud."

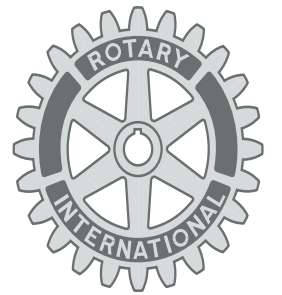

Let the item stand for at least twenty minutes and then immerse it in water overnight. Then properly dispose of the item.

7.Do not throw burned out sparklers on the ground.

The hot debris left over from the sparkler can burn someone if they step on it.

8. Always wear cotton or denim clothing, whenever you use fireworks.

This includes long pants, & eye protetion.
