WASHINGTON – U.S. Senators Johnny Isakson, R-Ga., and David Perdue, R-Ga., today joined a bipartisan group of senators in calling for offshore energy legislation that allows Georgia and other Atlantic coastal states to share in the revenue from energy resources developed offshore.

In January, the U.S. Department of the Interior proposed opening the Mid- and South-Atlantic regions to offshore oil and gas leasing. Senators Isakson and Perdue along with other senators from the Southeast Atlantic delegation sent a letter to the leadership of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee requesting that their states, including Georgia, receive a portion of revenue from offshore energy production, just as Gulf Coast states currently receive for oil and gas drilling off their shores.

Kick Open the Doorway to Liberty: What Are We Waiting For?

Everything this nation once stood for is being turned on its head. Free speech, religious expression, privacy, due process, bodily integrity, the sanctity of human life, the sovereignty of the family, individuality, the right to self-defense, protection against police abuses, representative government, private property, human rights—the very ideals that once made this nation great—have become casualties of a politically correct, misguided, materialistic, amoral, militaristic culture.

Indeed, I’m having a hard time reconciling the America I know and love with the America being depicted in the daily news headlines, where corruption, cronyism and abuse have taken precedence over the rights of the citizenry and the rule of law.

What kind of country do we live in where it’s acceptable for police to shoot unarmed citizens, for homeowners to be jailed for having overgrown lawns (a Texas homeowner was actually sentenced to 17 days in jail and fined $1700 for having an overgrown lawn), for kids to be tasered and pepper sprayed for acting like kids at school (many are left with health problems ranging from comas and asthma to cardiac arrest), and for local governments to rake in hefty profits under the guise of traffic safety (NPR reports that police departments across the country continue to require quotas for arrests and tickets, a practice that is illegal but in effect)?

Why should we Americans have to put up with the government listening in on our phone calls, spying on our emails, subjecting us to roadside strip searches, and generally holding our freedoms hostage in exchange for some phantom promises of security? As I document in my new book Battlefield America: The War on the American People, it doesn’t matter where you live—big city or small town—it’s the same scenario being played out over and over again in which government agents ride roughshod over the rights of the citizenry. It doesn’t matter how much money you make, what politics you subscribe to, or what God you worship: we are all potential suspects, terrorists and lawbreakers in the eyes of the government. The Boston tea party happened On the night of December 16, 1773. More than 200 years later, we are once again suffering under a long train of abuses and usurpations. What Americans today must decide is how committed they are to the cause of freedom and how far they’re willing to go to restore what has been lost.

What are we waiting for, indeed?

Fort Hood shooting victims receive long-delayed Purple Hearts, may still have to fight for benefits

WASHINGTON – Victims of the 2009 Fort Hood terror attack finally received their long-delayed honor on Friday at a Purple Heart ceremony in Texas -- though they may have to keep fighting to get military benefits.

Nearly 50 survivors lined up at the ceremony held at Fort Hood on Friday, and all were given either a Purple Heart or Defense of Freedom medal for their injuries. The ceremony was years in the making, as the U.S. government initially described the attack as mere workplace violence, and not terrorism. But the medal, while long-sought, may be symbolic.

At least one survivor told Fox News ahead of the ceremony that the Army has so far denied him any benefits, and his fellow servicemembers are likely in for a similar struggle.

"It sounds like there's going to be some more fighting ahead of us with the Army, at least in regards to benefits," retired Staff Sgt. Shawn Manning, who was shot six times by Maj. Nidal Hasan, told Fox News on Friday. He explained the Army is not defining the injuries as combat-related.

"I think it's almost unheard of for someone to receive the Purple Heart but not have their injuries classified as combat-related," Manning said.

Manning said "the fact that you have an Al Qaeda-inspired terrorist attack that we were shot in and that's not combat related, I think is just ridiculous." Fox News reported Thursday that Manning was being denied benefits.

In February, the Army, under heavy political pressure by Texas lawmakers, cleared the way for the military and civilian distinctions after the shooting was declared an act of international terrorism and not workplace violence.

The Purple Heart medals are typically awarded for wounds and acts of bravery in a war zone although it can be authorized in other situations including international terrorist attacks against the United States. The Defense of Freedom medal is the civilian equivalent to the Purple Heart.

Thirteen people were killed and more than 30 others wounded in the Nov. 5, 2009 attack by Hasan.

Hasan, an Army psychiatrist, was convicted in 2013 of 13 counts of premeditated murder and 32 counts of attempted murder. He was sentenced to death.

Following the attack, the lack of recognition for those killed and wounded during Hasan's rampage angered some of the victims and their families. The Army's initial refusal to call the Fort Hood attack international terrorism led Congress to include a provision in the 2015 National Defense Authorization Act that required the Department of Defense to review the Fort Hood case for Purple Heart recipients.

Fox News' Catherine Herridge contributed to this report.

SEEDS FROM THE SOWER

Michael A. Guido, D.D.
Metter, Georgia

Waiting, at best, is difficult. Giving up, however, can be disastrous.

We often hear the warning, "Don't ever pray for patience. God may take you at your word and hide from you for a long, long time." Whether or not we pray for patience, we often end up waiting on God for a long, long time. It is easy to convince ourselves that "I've waited long enough. It's time for me to strike out on my own. God will eventually catch up with me."

"We wait in hope for the Lord," said David, "He is our help and shield!" Why would a king with armies and wise men, property and power advise people to wait? Why not, as a warrior, "move into combat?"

From his past David could predict his future. First, the God who created all things, is above all things, sees all things, controls all things will, when it is time, come and "do His thing." David had experienced God at work in his life and certainly came to believe in God's presence and power in his life. So, he reassures us and reminds us that He "is now and will be in the future our helper and our shield."

As our helper, He will, at the appropriate time, deliver us. We may not know when or understand what method of deliverance He will use, but we do know that He will deliver those who trust in Him. We have His word because it is in His Word. However, until He does, we are reminded that He is our shield - the One who will defend us. Our hope is in His hands.
