Still or Sparkling Liter

Whiskey is a spirit distilled from malted grain; including barley, rye, wheat & corn. Once distilled, it is typically aged in wooden casks of oak from where it draws its characteristic chemical composition, taste and particular nose. The word whiskey comes from the gaelic 'Uisce beatha' which translates to 'the water of life' and its meaning traces back to the original 'medicinal' nature of its production.

Although all whiskeys are not the same, they share these characteristics. But let's find out what makes them unique

Scotch Whisky

All Scotch whisky was originally made from malted barley, but over the centuries commercial distillers have begun adding wheat and rye to some whiskies.

Essentially Scotch is divided into five distinct categories:

- Single Malt Scotch Whiskey (distilled in a single distillery and 100% malted barley)
- Single Grain Scotch Whisky (single distillery, any grain other than barley)
- Blended Malt Scotch Whisky (formerly called "vatted malt" or "pure malt")
- Blended Grain Scotch Whisky (a blend of two or more single grain scotch whiskies from different distilleries)
- Blended Scotch Whisky (a blend of one or more single malt scotch whiskies with one or more single grain scotch whiskies from different distilleries)

All Scotch whisky must be aged in Scotland in oak barrels for at least three years. Any age statement on a bottle of Scotch whisky, expressed in numerical form, must reflect the age of the youngest whisky used to produce that product. A whisky with an age statement is known as guaranteed-age whisky.

Irish Whiskeys

Normally triple distilled, and by law, must be produced in Ireland, aged in wooden casks for a period of no less than three years and bottled in Ireland. Irish whiskeys fall into one of several types; single malt, single grain, blended and pure pot still whiskey. Slainte!

Rye whiskey has traditionally been known as Canadian whiskey but in more recent years has started to build significant substyles and popularity among whisky drinkers and has become a large part of the American Whiskey market. In the US to be considered a Rye Whiskey the mash bill must contain at least 51% rye

Vodka

Traditionally made by distilling the liquid from cereal grains that have been fermented, with potatoes arising as a substitute in more recent times, and some modern brands using fruits as the base. Vodka is traditionally drunk “neat” (not mixed with water, ice, or other mixers), and it is often served chilled in the vodka belt of Belarus, Estonia, Finland, Iceland, Lithuania, Latvia, Norway, Poland, Russia, Sweden, and Ukraine.

Gin

Distilled alcoholic drink that derives its predominant flavor from juniper berries. Gin originated as a medicinal liquor made by monks in Italy.

Gin today is produced in different ways from a wide range of herbal ingredients, giving rise to a number of distinct styles and brands. After juniper, gin tends to be flavored with botanical/herbal, spice, floral or fruit-flavors or often a combination.

Rum

Rum is a liquor made by fermenting then distilling sugarcane molasses or sugarcane juice. The distillate, a clear liquid, is usually aged in oak barrels

The beverage has famous associations with the Royal Navy (where it was mixed with water or beer to make grog) and piracy (where it was consumed as bumbo).

Grappa

Grappa is traditionally produced in Northern Italy. The flavor of grappa, like that of wine, depends on the type and quality of the grapes used, as well as the specifics of the distillation process. Grappa is made by distilling the skins, pulp, seeds, and stems (i.e., the pomace) left over from winemaking after pressing the grapes.

Port–Dry Sack–Madeira

Porto, or simply port, is a Portuguese fortified wine produced with distilled grape spirits exclusively in the Douro Valley in the northern provinces of Portugal. It is typically a sweet, red wine, often served as a dessert wine, although it also comes in dry, semi-dry, and white varieties.

After centuries of port wine's success, other port-style fortified wines started to be produced outside Portugal. However, under the European Union Protected Designation of Origin guidelines, only products from Portugal are allowed to be labeled "port" or "Porto".
