WHY I DON'T PARK NEXT TO BUICKS

Boxing promoter Don King once said, “Only in America will you see people circling the parking lot looking for a close space at a gym.” How ironic, and, unfortunately, how true.

I read another quote about how people will walk for miles inside big box stores but are too lazy to push their shopping carts 10 feet to the cart corrals in the parking lots. Yep.

If we are being honest, we all have parking habits. Some of us will take the closest spot to the store, regardless of how long we have to wait or how tight the space may be. Others of us will park in the middle of the lot away from all cars, even in a rainstorm. Some of us even park under lights each time to minimize break-ins. Not a bad idea.

Many of us learned the hard way to not park by shopping cart corrals, as a few loose carts and a strong wind gust can create quite a demolition derby — and, surprisingly, those tiny wheels can really pick up speed.

My parking habits changed throughout my life, depending on what I was driving. When I had an old, beat-up car, I would park in the tightest of spots. One more door ding wouldn't even be noticeable, I rationalized. But when I had a newer vehicle, I would carefully select a spot to minimize the door ding risk.

I am continually amazed that an F-350 pickup can fit in one parking spot but a tiny foreign sports car seems to always take two — and then the driver acts shocked when noticing someone keys the paint.

When I was a kid and my dad and I would go to a grocery store, he would park out in the middle of the lot. I would ask him what was wrong with the spots up front. He would tell me, “We will save those for the old people.”

We don't have a lot of cars in our parking lot at work. As such, we tend to park in every other space, kind of like how teenage boys sit when they go to a movie together.

When my aging father-in-law was still alive, I would notice how he would push open his car door with his feet, and how his door would bang into the car next to him each time. Ever since that observation, I avoid parking next to Buicks... and going to the gym.

How about you? What parking habits do you have? Send me a note and let me know.

Have a great week, and thanks for reading. ■

RECIPE

MANAGE HECTIC MORNINGS WITH QUICK, HEALTHY BREAKFASTS

(Family Features) Getting kids up and out the door is a challenge all on its own, and on those busy school mornings when nothing seems to run smoothly, healthy breakfasts can go by the wayside. While it's widely recognized as the most important meal of the day, that doesn't always mean you have time to sit down and enjoy it.

Solving your morning rush with grab-and-go breakfasts you can make ahead of time accomplishes both goals at once: staying on schedule and fueling your kiddos (and yourself) for the day ahead. These delicious and nutritious recipes come from Healthy Family Project's 2024 Back to School Campaign, which is raising $12,000 for the Foundation for Fresh Produce to support children's accessibility to fresh fruits and vegetables.

With a simple graham cracker crust and creamy Greek yogurt filling, Mandarin Orange No-Bake Tarts offer another refreshing, kid-friendly morning meal. They can help you start your day on the right foot whether you're short on time or able to eat a quick bite together as a family. ■

MANDARIN ORANGE NO-BAKE TARTS

Recipe courtesy of Healthy Family Project

Prep time: 10 minutes

Freeze time: 1 hour

Ingredients:

- 1 cup graham cracker crumbs
- 2 tablespoons butter, melted
- 1 cup plain nonfat Greek yogurt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 2 tablespoons honey or maple syrup
- 4 mandarin oranges, peeled and segmented

Directions:

In bowl, mix graham cracker crumbs with melted butter. Press mixture into bottom of individual mini tart pans or mini muffin tin. Refrigerate crusts to set while preparing filling.

In bowl, combine Greek yogurt, vanilla and honey or maple syrup. Mix well.

Spoon yogurt mixture into chilled crusts.

Freeze tarts at least 1 hour. Top with mandarin segments.
