ROTARY CLUB FUNDS BOOKS FOR MEADOW VIEW

The Adel Rotary Club has matched a Rotary District 6000 Community Grant for $600 to provide $1,200 for books for the book vending machine at Meadow View Elementary School. Rotary District 6000 Community Grants return money contributed by Rotarians to the Rotary Foundation to local clubs for community projects. Since literacy is one of the focus areas of the Adel Rotary Club, a service project for the Club has been to support the purchase of the book vending machine and books to stock it. These grant funds will put more books into the hands of students this school year.

coins by meeting reading goals, modeling good reading habits by reading to younger students, being brave in selecting a new reading genre, or by other acts of good behavior or leadership. Students then cheer each other on when they use their coin to choose a book to keep. Students also choose the books to fill the vending machine, help order, load the machine, and even choose the light pattern that will be displayed when a book is chosen. The machine also speaks words of encouragement when a book is selected. What better way to encourage reading than making it fun and meaningful? ■

WOULD THE FEDS PUT ME IN JAIL?

As we feverishly and frustratingly scroll through streaming options on Netflix, Amazon Prime or Hulu today to find a show we actually want to watch, we forget what the process was like to pick out a movie not too long ago. I took this walk down memory lane with friends the other day.

Remember going to a rental store and walking the aisles, looking for just the right movie to check out? It was an experience most of us actually looked forward to. The new releases would go quickly, so you found yourself perusing through the bargain-priced oldies. And, more than likely, you rented more than one. Checking out movies was fun. Paying late fees? Not so much.

In the early years, only the VHS (Video Home System) tape covers were on the shelves, often filled with Styrofoam to fill the box. You had to take those boxes to the check-out counter to get the real tapes. I know this because I still have a Styrofoam-filled box of the movie “Shane” that some girls in college “borrowed” from the video store and gave to me.

Before VHS players were common, we had to rent the players, too. These machines weighed about as much as an 8-year-old boy and were packaged in large, zippered, well-insulated bags. They were simple, though. Once you attached the cable and turned to channel 3, you were set. Just insert the tape, push play and hope the prior renter was kind enough to rewind.

When VHS players originally arrived on the scene, they were an incredible breakthrough in technology. No longer did you have to use your TV Guide to remember when to watch your favorite shows. Now, you could program them to be recorded. At least in theory. This, of course, was dependent on your ability to set the clock and the recording time, which were no easy tasks. A simple look at the VCRs at the time with “12:00” flashing on the displays proved it.

VHS technology was introduced in 1976 with an original retail price tag for the players up to $1,400. By 1980, VHS had had 60% of the North American market and seemed invincible — until DVDs took over. They also seemed invincible. We know the rest of the story.

I still have a few of my VHS movies around the house. My college wrestling tapes. A Godzilla movie. A bootleg KISS concert. Our wedding video. And, several years and a few kids later, dozens of Disney movies. I still have a VHS player somewhere, too. Whether it works or not is another question. If it does, and if I could find a blank tape somewhere, could I record a movie from one of the modern streaming services on it? Or would the feds put me in jail for this — and the stolen “Shane” movie box? In reality, the recording of the streaming shows would never happen for me, as I would first have to figure out how to stop the clock from flashing “12:00.”

Have a great week, and thanks for reading. ■

About David Young

David is a seventh-generation Iowan born and raised in Van Meter where he resides today.

He is a graduate of Drake University where he currently teaches.

David previously served as U.S. Congressman for Iowa's 3rd Congressional District and sponsored legislation passed into law to help our veterans, farmers, small business owners, teachers, seniors, and Iowa workers and families.

Now, in the Iowa House, David is continuing his work to make our community a better place to live. As an Assistant Majority Leader, David is working to keep our streets safe, strengthen local schools, and lower taxes on hardworking Iowans.

- ✔ Safer Communities
David is a proven supporter of law enforcement and always backs the blue. He helped pass legislation to fight human and drug trafficking.
- ✔ Stronger Schools
David is a strong advocate for our local schools and parents. He voted to increase teacher pay, refocus K through 12 curriculums on the basics, and expand access to childcare.
- ✔ Lower Taxes
David will continue to vote for lower taxes and fight to eliminate wasteful government spending to lower inflation and the cost of essentials – from groceries to gas.
