Sharing The Joy
Poetry By Cheryl Murph

It is only hours away from it being a brand New Year. For those of us not at a hospital or at the mortuary, I are so very blessed to just be here.

When I was younger I remember going to parties on New Years Eve. I was playing with fire, pushing life to its limits. Yet not for one day did I forget my Father above nor what I believe. I had been saved but I had backslid so far from God that I constantly was consumed by guilt and shame. No one made me do the things I did. I couldn't put my actions off on anyone as for as who I could blame. My unGodly actions I take full responsibility of all on my own. Once you have been truly saved you can drift, you can run and even fall flat on your face but the Holy Spirit will never leave you alone. You can't belong to God and run with the devil at the same time. When you try too, there will always be consequences sooner or later. Believe me, I have sure paid mine. Not one of us can throw the first stone at another. You are being mislead by this world if you believe your sin is not as bad as your sister's or brother's. The Bible tells us sin is sin. God does not have a set of scales he weighs with one against the other. Maybe it is because according to man's law some sin is great while some appear to be small. The self/righteous freely tell you their sins are not really sin at all!!!! The God I serve tells me in his word that sin is sin. No matter where you go to church, how much money you give or what charity you help, without being borne again the gates of Heaven you will not enter in. I pray with this New Year all of God's children will realize they will never find peace as long as they are straddling the fence. Until they give it all to him, no matter where they go, who they go with or what they try, nothing they do will ever make sense. And to all the unbelievers, the atheus, and those whose chose not to discuss death or think that there is no eternity, I pray will find Jesus Christ and not be as hard headed as me.

Remember til our paths cross again, Philippians 4:4-10
