A Terrible Blow

Newprint paper tariffs could cost 600K jobs.

"The tariffs will mean fewer pages to report community news and could mean staffing cuts."

Bill Rogers, S.C. Press Association Executive Director.

By Justin Lee Campbell
The Journal, Seneca, SC

Leaders in local, state and national newspaper markets have expressed concern that two announced tariffs on newsprint could cost the United States hundreds of thousands of jobs and harm community newspapers.

South Carolina Press Association executive director Bill Rogers said preliminary tariffs by the federal government on Canadian-imported uncoated groundwood paper are a "tremendous blow" to both newspapers and their readers.

The tariffs have driven up newsprint prices by 20 to 30 percent for newspapers, printers and other publishers, according to the non-profit trade organization News Media Alliance. Rogers said the price increase is hard to absorb. "If the tariffs stand, it will be a terrible blow to the newspaper readers of South Carolina and the newspapers that serve them," Rogers said. "The tariffs will mean fewer pages to report community news and could mean staffing cuts."

More than 600,000 jobs in the U.S. could be lost due to the tariffs, according to Stop Tariffs on Printers and Publishers (STOPP). STOPP is a coalition of printers, publishers, paper suppliers and distributors fighting the tariffs proposed by the Trump administration. The number of jobs at stake could jump to more than 1 million workers once all the supporting industry from ink to machinery suppliers is considered, according to Hal Welch, general manager for The Journal and Edwards Printing.

"This is a tax on news and information," Welch said. "This administration — which we supported — has decided it wants to restrict information to the people. The most vital role of newspapers is reporting on the activities of governments. And newspapers do more of that at the ground level than any form of news media. It's no secret that a tax like this will restrict that access. This is a huge blow to the readers, whether they realize it or not."

Last month, U.S. Secretary of Commerce Wilbur Ross announced the government would start collecting antidumping tariffs at a rate of 22.16 percent from Canadian importers after the commerce officials concluded they were selling the paper below fair market value, according to a news release. A final decision on that tariff is scheduled in August. "President Trump made it clear from the beginning that we will vigorously administer our trade laws to provide U.S. industry with relief from unfair trade practices," Ross said in the statement.

Welch said the tariffs are "misleading the American people."

"There simply aren't enough paper mills in the U.S. to supply the paper that we need to go about our daily business," Welch said. "This is all over one mill in Washington State that employs some 300 people, and we're willing to risk a million U.S. jobs over it? It's nonsense. Second to staffing payroll, paper is the largest expense in any newspaper."

The antidumping tariffs came in addition to countervailing tariffs implemented in January that could become final in May. The government began collecting cash from importers to counteract what officials said were "market-distorting effects" from alleged subsidies by foreign governments, according to the statement. The commerce department concluded the Canadian government was subsidizing production of uncoated groundwood paper by 4.42-9.93 percent.

"(The Jan. 9) preliminary decision allows U.S. producers to receive relief from the market-distorting effects of potential government subsidies while taking into account the need to keep groundwood paper prices affordable for domestic consumers," Ross said in the statement.

Welch disagreed. "With all due respect, if Mr. Ross thinks there's anything affordable about a 30 percent price increase over 60 days on our largest commodity, then he needs to find another job; he's not fit to work in the commerce department," Welch said.

"At The Journal, we use roughly 5 tons of paper each week," Welch added. "At our press facility, we print more than 40 other newspapers — one of the largest printing operations going today. There, we go through a total of nearly 2,000 tons of paper a year."

An investigation into alleged unfair trade practices by Canadian importers began after North Pacific Paper Company (NORPAC) petitioned Commerce last August, according to a news release. North Pacific Paper Company is a paper mill owned by a hedge fund in Washington State.

S.C. Press Association president Jane Pigg stressed that NORPAC is the only company that supports the tariffs. The American Forest and Paper Association opposes the petition by NORPAC, and no other U.S. paper mill supports NORPAC, according to News Media Alliance. Pigg, publisher of The Link in Cheraw, said the tariffs "need to go away" for "legitimate" reasons. She said she believes every community needs a strong local newspaper to not only report the news, but also allow communities to share "the happy times."

"All the events that go into the family Bible, are hung on the refrigerator, the pictures, the stories, the things that matter the most in the lives of families—those things will not be shared with the community if local newspapers are not there to share them," Pigg said.

A True Christian

Sharing The Joy

Poetry By Cheryl Murph

A true Christian will seek God daily and remember to pray.
A true Christian will give up his flesh and be willing to follow God in spite of what the world has to say.
A true Christian forgives and does not judge others on account of their sin.
A true Christian will be true to themselves.
A true Christian never changes in public, when the preacher walks in.
A true Christian will falter but will rise up and carry on.
A true Christian will suffer on this earth but find true joy once they reach their Heavenly home.
A true Christian will be mocked, made fun of and denied.
A true Christian God will know their heart and remember the tears they've cried.
A true Christian is never perfect but they are always striving to be.
A true Christian fears God and demands their marriage be bound by a cord of three.
A true Christian never has to worry about where they will go when they die.
A true Christian will spend all eternity in the sweet by and by.

Remember til our paths cross again, Philippians 4:4-10

Using a non-surgical mini dental implant technique (F.I.R.S.T.), it is now possible to permanently replace anything from a single tooth to a full mouth restoration. Your beautiful smile can be seen in 1 or 2 short visits with minimal discomfort, without destroying healthy tooth enamel and without the long healing time or high cost typically associated with conventional dental implants.
