Keep Kids Busy With A Summertime PLAYlist

(NAPSI)—When school's out, it's up to parents and caregivers to keep kids busy. Instead of waiting to hear the dreaded "I'm bored," families can be prepared with fun activities to ensure children are playing and learning all vacation long.

According to experts at The Genius of PlayTM, a national movement to encourage more play in children's lives, research shows that play is not only critical to healthy child development—it's an important teaching tool. Through play, kids build physical skills, improve cognitive abilities, learn communication and social skills, process and express emotions, and increase creativity.

Meredith Sinclair, author and The Genius of Play Ambassador, suggests writing activities on popsicle sticks and placing them in a play jar to create a PLAYlist of fun ideas. Whenever children are bored or need inspiration, encourage them to select from the play jar to stir up their creativity.

To help get your PLAYlist started, Sinclair recommends the following activities:

- Grow a garden—A fun, educational way to let kids get dirty is by having them start their very own vegetable garden. They'll love planting the seeds to watch them grow. They'll also be learning a sense of responsibility and getting a confidence boost by being proud of what has blossomed under their care.

somed under their care.

- Camping—No need to go far. Gather all the camping essentials, such as flashlights, sleeping bags, s'more ingredients and a pop-up tent, head to the living room or the backyard and set up camp for the night.

- Rock art—Whether used as decorations or to leave kind messages around the neighborhood, rock art is a trendy and easy craft. Have kids collect rocks of various shapes and sizes, and once the rocks are clean, use acrylic paint to decorate them.

- Make a movie—Nurture your children's inner filmmakers by encouraging them to create their own movie using a smartphone/tablet, some of their toys to play the characters and crafts for scenery. Once the movie is finished, gather the family and some popcorn to have a viewing party and admire your children's creativity.

- DIY T-shirts—Have children play clothing designer for the day. Let them personalize a T-shirt with craft supplies such as tie-dye, puff paints, sequins, iron-on patches and anything else they might like.

More play ideas, expert advice and other play resources are available at TheGeniusofPlay.org. Follow @GeniusOfPlay on Facebook and Instagram for even further play inspiration.

Childhood

Sharing The Joy
Poetry By Cheryl Murph

As a child growing up we had certain rules to follow that we were assigned to by our mother and dad. The first thing was you never talked back to your parents nor did you stomp off screaming and acting all mad. There was one recliner in our living room and my dad's name was on it and his name only when he was at home. We could not talk to our friends passed a certain time and I know for sure we would have never had our own phone. And our parents by all means saw a bump on the head or the first sight of blood as something that would heal. And for as the ever after well, Heaven and Hell both were real. We were taught to say yes ma'am, no ma'am, yes sir and no sir. Some friends seen our parents as strict and in some ways I guess sometimes my siblings and I also thought they were. We had chores and if they were not done everyday then we could expect a whipping no doubt. Our parents never compromised, they never made deals. So there was no need to act pitiful much less pout. However we never were beaten or mistreated in any way. We were never cursed at and all the whippings we got we each one deserved, needless to say. We said grace every time we ate and we said our prayers every night. Our childhood was never perfect but our parents taught us how to respect others and know the difference between wrong and right. Most of all we were taught about Jesus Christ and that he will always be there for us to show us the way. No, our childhood was far from perfect but I am so thankful because the seeds my parents planted are the ones I need most, even today. Proverbs 22:6

Remember til our paths cross again, Philippians 4:4-10
