Unleash Girls' Strength At Girl Scouts

(NAPSI)—Today's youth are more vocal than ever about the change they want to see in the world, and Girl Scouts are the most equipped with the skills needed to make a real impact. Girl Scouts will now be even more prepared to address society's most pressing needs, both today and in their future careers, with Girl Scouts of the USA's (GSUSA's) release of 30 new badges in exciting fields such as cybersecurity, environmental advocacy, mechanical engineering, robotics, computer science, and space exploration. The organization's new and existing programming will unleash your girl's strength and confidence in a supportive all-girl environment.

An All-Girl Leadership Experience

Illustrating how important it is for girls and volunteers to join Girl Scouts, the KPMG Women's Leadership Study of more than 3,000 professional and college women found that early exposure to leadership has a significant effect on a woman's perceptions of her ability to lead. What's more, 76 percent of women today wish they had learned more about leadership and had more leadership opportunities while growing up. Girl Scouts' all-girl environment allows girls to take healthy risks, learn from failure, have one-of-a-kind experiences, and form friendships that will last a lifetime.

Research supports the benefits of an all-girl environment. For example, Linda J. Sax, associate professor of education at the UCLA Graduate School of Education & Information Studies, found that girls who attend single-gender high schools show higher levels of civic engagement, greater interest in engineering careers, and measurably more self-confidence in public speaking.

New Ways to Learn and Lead

Girl Scouts' new programming includes Environmental Stewardship badges for girls of all ages, teaching them to respect the outdoors and take action to protect the natural world. For girls in middle and high school, there are badges on how to program, design, and showcase robots and learn about computer science and engineering. Girls in grades 11 and 12 can earn the College Knowledge badge, which covers how to research the admissions process, financial aid, and other factors—providing crucial information for many girls who don't have this kind of support outside Girl Scouts.

Girls can learn the soft and hard skills they need to succeed, in a safe, all-girl space.

All Girl Scouts in elementary school are now able to earn badges in cybersecurity, space science, and mechanical engineering, introducing them to the fundamentals of these timely topics in a fun and engaging way.

"Girl Scouts' new badges sound awesome, and I can't wait to earn them, especially the ones in Environmental Stewardship," said Shelby O'Neil, a current Girl Scout Ambassador going into 12th grade. "Because of Girl Scouts and the Gold Award, I was able to initiate a No Straw November campaign to advocate for reducing plastic pollution, and I even convinced companies including a leading airline to replace plastic straws with marine-friendly alternatives. Girl Scouts has offered me amazing experiences that have helped me become a leader, gain confidence, and try new things. I think every girl should have the opportunity to join Girl Scouts."

Sharing The Joy

Poetry By Cheryl Murph

Mrs. Logan had tried and tried to think of some way to teach her two sons the importance of responsibility for their own good. After losing her husband, Mrs. Logan knew she had to play mother and dad the best way she possibly could. So she decided to get the ten and eleven year old boys each a puppy of their own. It would be their responsibility to feed and water their pup daily. They too would make sure to bath them and keep fresh shavings in their homes. Both boys were excited the day they adopted their furry friends as they pondered over and over before deciding on their names. Luke was a real trooper when it came to his gold retriever Chase. However Levi and his shaggy gray terrier "Reggie" moved at a much slower pace. Luke worked with his dog everyday after school rain or shine. He understood one of the greatest gifts he could give was his time. Levi watered and fed his dog but for as showing any interest or desire in getting to know Reggie it was something he never cared to do. I felt for them both the dog and the boy. Had only Levi took some time he would have discovered a tremendous amount of self worth, happiness and joy. I watched before my very eyes the difference in the two boys and their dogs as it reminded me of someone I once knew. I thought about where I was with Christ not so long ago and i am sad to say unlike Luke, I was more like Levi. I said my prayers, went to church and paid my tithes. Yet it was the bond with Jesus Christ I was lacking as for as what I needed to do. God wanted me to get to know him, spend time with him. And most of all he wanted me to have a desire instead of a "have too". In our walk with Jesus Christ we will never be all he wants us to be until we have a desire for him with all our heart. He is just waiting on us for the adoption process, because he has already done his part.

Remember til our paths cross again, Philippians 4:4-10

You have choices in advertising. Let us help you choose wisely.

You probably have over 100 channels of video content to choose from when watching TV. Which one is the best to use when you want to advertise?

There simply isn't one station that reaches all your target audience. In order to insure you reach all your customers you would have to spend your money on dozens of stations. That adds up to a complex and immense gamble.

Gambling on audiences that increasingly take action to avoid commercials just doesn't make sense. Channel flipping, ad skipping, snack and bathroom breaks keep your ads away from the audience you are paying for.

Your free community paper changes all that. You can reach your customers with one ad. Our audited circulation guarantees that your ad will be seen by more people and get results. The fact remains that free community papers are

Boating Better With Quality Fuel

By Don Orken

(NAPSI)—I have spent many years of my life racing boats professionally and enjoying boats recreationally. My love for being out on the water has been passed down through my family, and it is truly a way of life for all of us. As the owner of the American Ethanol Mystic Powerboats, 51 foot Catamaran, I am always pushing to get every last ounce of performance out of the boat. There is a significant amount of highly technical work that goes into building, prepping, maintaining and driving a record-setting boat that frequently surpasses 200 mph out on the water in competition. Ironically, one often overlooked component of boat maintenance and performance is actually one of the simplest elements—the fuel.

Understanding Ethanol
We run our competition boat on a fuel blend that has a high concentration of ethanol, which is a renewable biofuel made from plants that reduce greenhouse gas emissions. Ethanol has higher octane than standard gasoline so it helps us gain horsepower and speed in the boat. It also burns cleaner and cooler, which is a smarter choice for our engines. And, since ethanol displaces toxic chemicals in gasoline that have been linked to groundwater contamination, cancer and smog, it's a choice we feel good about in protecting the waterways that are such an important part of our lives.

Saving Money
Ethanol certainly has a place within the boating world. It's an inexpensive source of octane that also promotes cleaner, more environmentally friendly boating, something anybody should be able to get behind. Ethanol-free gasoline is frequently sold near marinas at significantly higher costs than E10, and boaters should be aware that E10 is a choice that could save them money at the pump and be perfectly suited for their boat. Every major marine manufacturer—Kawasaki, Mercury Marine, OMC, Peasecraft, Tigerhawk, Tracker, Honda, Yamaha and others—approves 10 percent ethanol blends in their marine engines.

Getting the Most From Your Boat
Boating is a way of life for many families other than my own. Whether you're racing competitively or just
