A Wool Coat

Sharing The Joy
Poetry By Cheryl Murph

Mr. Barkley lived in a small wooden house at the very end of Courtney Lane. All the locals around town thought he surely must be insane. He was a loner, since his wife of 57 years had died. But the most odd thing was Mr. Barkley wore a wool coat no matter what the weather was like outside. He had his coat on even when it was ninety eight degrees. He poured sweat and a tired worn out man was easy to see. Do I have your attention now? Can you see Mr. Barkley in your mind? This poem has an usual twist but a comparison you'll find. Mr. Barkley never had wore a coat that we could actually see. But as I imagine him in his coat everyday in extremely hot weather, just the thoughts of it are so draining to me. The same way with depression. It is like that of a wool coat you wear everywhere you go. People that haven't worn a wool coat are likely not to know. Though it may not physically be seen the burden of it can be all but unreal. The longer you carry it around the heavier it feels. Unlike a coat, people may find this sickness hard to define. The many years I was depressed most never even noticed mine. The only way I began to get better was to cry out over and over to my Lord in prayer. I knew if I allowed him to lead me he would send me the help needed and constantly be there. He did and still does but it is a process that only he can provide. If anyone tells you your crazy, you can just get over it, then they have no clue of how hard you have tried and tried. There is hope but you must allow God to renew your mind. Leave your old playgrounds and playmates behind. It requires a change of life style as well as a change with-in. The flesh alone is too weak and too selfish to disown who we are and change the person we've always been. If you are struggling with depression ask God to help you and place you where you need to be. I know he will reveal a answer to you the same as he did for me.

Remember til our paths cross again, Philippians 4:4-10

You have choices in advertising. Let us help you choose wisely.

You probably have over 100 channels of video content to choose from when watching TV. Which one is the best to use when you want to advertise?

There simply isn't one station that reaches all your target audience. In order to insure you reach all your customers you would have to spend your money on dozens of stations. That adds up to a complex and immense gamble.

Gambling on audiences that increasingly take action to avoid commercials just doesn't make sense. Channel flipping, ad skipping, snack and bathroom breaks keep your ads away from the audience you are paying for.

Your free community paper changes all that. You can reach your customers with one ad. Our audited circulation guarantees that your ad will be seen by more people and get results. The fact remains that free community papers are

Boating Better With Quality Fuel

By Don Orken

(NAPSJ)—I have spent many years of my life racing boats professionally and enjoying boats recreationally. My love for being out on the water has been passed down through my family, and it is truly a way of life for all of us. As the owner of the American Ethanol Mystic Powerboats, 51-foot Catamaran, I am always pushing to get every last ounce of performance out of the boat. There is a significant amount of highly technical work that goes into building, preparing, maintaining, and driving a record-setting boat that frequently surpasses 200 mph out on the water in competition. Ironically, one often overlooked component of boat maintenance and performance is actually one of the simplest elements—the fuel.

Understanding Ethanol
We run our competition boat on a fuel blend that has a high concentration of ethanol, which is a renewable biofuel made from plants that reduce greenhouse gas emissions. Ethanol has higher octane than standard gasoline so it helps us gain horsepower and speed in the boat. It also burns cleaner and cooler, which is a smarter choice for our engines. And, since ethanol displaces toxic chemicals in gasoline that have been linked to groundwater contamination, cancer and smog, it's a choice we feel good about in protecting the waterways that are such an important part of our lives.

Saving Money
Ethanol certainly has a place within the boating world.
