Struggling With Addiction? Tips On Finding Quality Treatment

(NAPSI)—It can be overwhelming and confusing to know where to start if you need to find treatment for an alcohol or drug addiction. Addiction touches nearly everyone in some way, yet there is no one-size-fits all approach to effective treatment. With many addiction treatment options, finding a program that will provide the quality care you or your loved one needs to address their specific addiction issues can be challenging. These steps will help you know what to look for to find a treatment program that is high quality and tailored to your needs.

Treating addiction doesn't have to be something you do alone.

How Do You Find A Treatment Provider?

If you have insurance, a good first step is to contact your insurer. Ask about your coverage and whether they have a network of preferred providers. If you don't have insurance, you still have access to quality care. Each state has funding to provide treatment for people without insurance coverage. Find out where to call for information about payment for services at: <https://bit.ly/2Am4htd>.

What Should You Look For In A Program Or Provider?

Quality treatment programs offer a full range of services accepted as effective in treatment and recovery from addiction. Keep these points in mind when weighing your options.

1. Accreditation: Make sure the treatment program is licensed or certified by the state. This ensures the provider meets basic quality and safety requirements. You should also check that the program is accredited, which means it meets standards of care set by a national, compliance organization. Be sure to ask the program to show you how people using their services have rated them.

2. Evidence-Based Treatment: Check to determine if the program offers effective and proven substance use disorder treatments, such as medication management, cognitive behavioral therapy, drug and alcohol counseling, education about the risks of drug and alcohol use, and peer support. Quality treatment providers or programs offer more than one form of effective treatment. Effective programs will also be mindful of or address mental health and physical disorders that will affect substance use treatment.

3. Medication: Confirm whether the program offers FDA approved medication for recovery from alcohol and opioid use disorders. However, keep in mind that currently, there are no FDA approved medications to help prevent relapse from other problem substances.

4. Families: Family members have an important role in understanding the impact of addiction on families and providing support. Make sure the treatment program includes family members in the treatment process.

5. Continuing Care: For many people addiction requires ongoing medication and supports. Quality programs provide treatment for the long term, which may include ongoing counseling or recovery coaching and support, and helps in meeting other basic needs like sober housing, employment supports, and continued family involvement.

Compare Yourself

Sharing The Joy

Poetry By Cheryl Murph

If you compare your Taurus to your neighbors Lexus, chances are you will never be satisfied with your decent running car.
If you compare your Taurus to the neighbor that rides a scooter to work you will appreciate your car and realize having heat and A/C is better by far.
If you surf the web for the latest fashions you will complain how old and out of style your wardrobe is compared to what you just saw.
But if you compare your clothes to those that sleep under bridges and wear rags, you will be grateful even if they come from The Goodwill instead of the mall.
If you compare your body with famous models in magazines and on TV screens, chances are you will never be happy in your own skin.
But if you take one trip to The Veterans Hospital you will thank God daily once you see the shape they are in.
If you compare your family to those on Facebook that seem so happy all the time, you will find fault in everyone you know.
But if you compare your family to those that have a loved one in prison, one in rehab for Crack or Cocaine, you will realize your family is blessed and you love them so.
If you compare your lifestyle to society you will stay exhausted from trying to keep up with all the latest trends, technology and materialistic things.
Or you can choose....
To do your best and trust in God for the desires of your heart
He chooses to bring.
(PSALM 37:3-5)

Remember til our paths cross again, Philippians 4:4-10
