My Birthday

Sharing The Joy
Poetry By Cheryl Murph

This September I just had another birthday!!!
I sit and think about all the things good and bad
through the years that have come my way.
Not that long ago I remember birthdays being about me, me, me.
But this year is another year that I am thankful I am not the person I use to be.
Not that I am at a place to stop trying to better myself,
but I am thankful the old me has left.
In God's word he tells us to work toward being more like him.
I began thinking about his son Jesus, the 12 disciples and all of them.
You know Jesus didn't ride into town on a fancy high stepping horse but a small donkey according to the pictures I have seen.
Back then he wore a simple robe.
There were no name brand clothes and designer jeans.
His compassion was so selfless toward all people, unlike the world
we live in today.
He endured constant rejection and bullying in the most cruel way.
His life was never once about himself for he gave to all expecting nothing in return.
But in this world we live in every generation grows more and more selfish and having compassion is their least concern.
God gives us the the greatest birthday present of all when he allows us to wake up everyday and go on with our life.
In a second he could take one or all of our children, he can take the best husband or the most loving wife.
He owes us nothing.
He died for you and I so that we may live in that beautiful place called Heaven for eternity.
Having my health and my loved ones is the greatest gift of all, to me.
May we all stop and remind ourselves everyday is our birthday.
To be able to continue on this earth is a gift from God to all man kind.
Even if you are able to read this you are blessed.
You are smart enough to read and be thankful your not blind.

Remember til our paths cross again, Philippians 4:4-10
