Parents Today

Sharing The Joy
Poetry By Cheryl Murph

Anna grew up in a generation where parents were in charge of how their home was ran.

A generation where parents were more concerned about discipline being respectful and not afraid to use a firm hand.

Yes ma'am, no ma'am, yes sir, and no sir was never an option in Anna's home.

And her and her siblings were also very limited to the time they spent on the phone.

No matter what her parents told her and her siblings to do they did it and dared to complain.

When talking to any adult you were to use Mr. or Mrs. and you were never allowed to call an adult by their first name.

Supper time was a time her whole family was usually there.

Before putting food on your plate you bowed your head and told God thank you in prayer.

Baseball, basketball, cheerleading and other activities were never more important than Anna's family all sitting down at the supper table for a homemade cooked meal.

Most kids back then didn't care if you lived in a mobile home or in a plain wooden house next to the the cotton mill.

Back in those days getting a whipping meant that you had parents who cared.

Anna and her siblings were taught to never make fun of others.

And no matter how little you had, you always shared.

Being bullied was not as popular back then because kids were told to always stand up for what is right.

Even if you had to pick up a big stick to finish the fight.

As far as words, the old saying, sticks and stones may break my bones but words will never hurt me!

Well parents told their kids that because it was the truth.

But oh how things have changed from how it use to be.

Even in God's word he tells us who spares the rod hates his son but he who loves him is careful to discipline him.

Proverbs 13:24

The same goes for the needy, the prideful, the rich and the poor.

Each measure I am sure is different according to the parent and the child.

One may require strong discipline while the other's may be mild.

Children aren't in no way meant to be abused yet they all need to understand the parent is the boss and should have the last say.

It is sad that every generation grows further from God's truth.

Especially in the world we live in today.

Remember til our paths cross again, Philippians 4:4-10
