Poetry By Cheryl Murph

Growing up in today's society everywhere you look there is someone or something telling or showing us the way we should act, speak and especially dress. For some women this can be exhausting and cause stress. Like living by a rule book, women will spend money they don't have to enhance their appearance as to how they look.

No matter how good one tries to look, we all have things that aren't so attractive about our own skin. So why do we struggle so hard to try the next best thing when natural beauty can only come from within? Even the men these days strive to be more handsome and more desirable than ever before.

Which is it, who you are or what you are that matters more? Our world is becoming so tangled in a web of self gratification. The Bible is being watered down and twisted to suit any lifestyle. We speak of love but what about God's road to salvation? What does it mean to win people's approval when one ignores the truth God has already shown us in his word? Such mentors become a voice of their own pleasure and demand to be heard.

Underneath our exterior, our make-up, our clothing, our friends and even our family that cheer us on,

God's word can't be twisted to defend us when we know we are wrong. I know I have worn my make-up, my expensive cobra skin boots and been everything but a Godly example both on the outside and in. I can assure you God never gives peace to a heart that belongs to him yet intentionally lives in sin.

No matter how well we may think we look, how well we may think we act, or how many likes we may get on Facebook,

God knows who seeks him with all their heart.

That is the only thing that keeps true Christians and Religion apart.
